SENIOR PRIVILEGES.

It has been, for some time, the established custom of this institution to allow the senior class more privileges than are granted to the members of the other classes. After a man has successfully passed the junior examinations and returned the following September, he dons the "gold cap cord." From the time this is done until commencement, the seniors assume, as it were, an independent air. The whole atmosphere of college life is changed to them, and now they are "IT." This privilege is one that is more abused and less regarded in its reality than any one thing connected with our college life here at Auburn.

There are men of all classes who loiter up town, who smoke and have their coats unbuttoned on the streets. But let it be said of the senior class that they are conscientious in the matter. They do not report an under-classman for breaking a rule for which they themselves are guilty of disregarding. We are all optimists, but we have to view the situation from an unbiased standpoint. Things are not what they ought to be. Our conduct should be cleansed. We should awaken our better natures and examine the prevailing conditions. Who will rectify the mistake? Who will champion the cause of the right?

HONOR SYSTEM.

When a theory of government has been tried and proves to be successful, it should be instituted upon a larger and more extended scale, and tried for a second time. The Honor System has proven successful in the junior and senior classes, and now it is a fitting time for the freshmen and sophomores to carefully consider the matter. We need the honor system in all of our classes. We ought to have the whole atmosphere surrounding the college student teeming with honesty. It is not so now. One man might know a subject perfectly, and then get a poorer mark than some man who knows absolutely nothing about it. This should not be. Every man should be independent of his fellow-man, and desire an honest failure more than a dishonest pass.

It would take some time for the Honor System to be deeply rooted at Auburn, but it can be done, and should be done. We need a college honor system, and not one promulgated and signed by the different classes. Perhaps it would be better to have it instituted in all the classes first, but in the long run it should be a fundamental law of the college. Let the students and professors awake to this fact, and more especially let the freshmen and sophomores take a stand for right and demand the privilege of having an Honor System in their classes. Let all talk of dishonesty be hushed, and then a battle for honesty everywhere will begin with such impetuosity that it can not avoid taking absolute possession of the student body.

THE YOUNG MAN'S DUTY TO HIS STATE.

When we first think of the twenty-five millions of electors in the United States, and realize that all may have an immediate share in the control of this grand government, the question naturally arises, of what value among such a host is the life and works of one man? The answer to this question is very simple. No person can clearly foresee what may be the effects of his deeds upon his fellow men and upon his native government, but his responsibilities do not extend beyond his powers. If he acts unselfishly and to the best of his ability for the good of his people, if he exerts his utmost power toward inspiring those about him to do likewise, his duty is done.

Every young man is one of the elements which compose the State or the Union. Each young man can be a potent factor in the shaping of this government, if he in the beginning of his life's career will only realize that he as an American citizen, is under many grave obligations to his State, and will seize and properly use the golden opportunities offered him. It is beyond the province of this brief article to give a minute discussion of the young man's duties in the various lines of work, but let it suffice to say that it is his imperative duty to render his services not only as a soldier, as a citizen or a politician, but equally so is the obligation resting upon him of rendering his services in the cause of elevating humanity, both mentally and morally, which go hand in hand.

The mere fact that every young man is not a descendant of some titled nobility, or is not an officer holding some high position in his government, does not signify that he cannot be of incalculable value to his State, but to the contrary, the truth is, that the best work of a State, that

THE YOUNG MAN'S DUTY TO HIS STATE.

When we first think of the twenty-five millions of electors in the United States, and realize that all may have an immediate share in the control of this grand government, the question naturally arises, of what value among such a host is the life and works of one man? The answer to this question is very simple. No person can clearly foresee what may be the effects of his deeds upon his fellow men and upon his native government, but his responsibilities do not extend beyond his powers. If he acts unselfishly and to the best of his ability for the good of his people, if he exerts his utmost power toward inspiring those about him to do likewise, his duty is done.

Every young man is one of the elements which compose the State or the Union. Each young man can be a potent factor in the shaping of this government, if he in the beginning of his life's career will only realize that he as an American citizen, is under many grave obligations to his State, and will seize and properly use the golden opportunities offered him. It is beyond the province of this brief article to give a minute discussion of the young man's duties in the various lines of work, but let it suffice to say that it is his imperative duty to render his services not only as a soldier, as a citizen or a politician, but equally so is the obligation resting upon him of rendering his services in the cause of elevating humanity, both mentally and morally, which go hand in hand.

The mere fact that every young man is not a descendant of some titled nobility, or is not an officer holding some high position in his government, does not signify that he cannot be of incalculable value to his State, but to the contrary, the truth is, that the best work of a State, that which controls the character of its people, is done not by the highest ranked men, but by the energetic and patriotic young men who diligently labor to perfect the morals of the people and the management of the institutions in their community.

Doubtless the example of our New England forefathers will to some extent suffice to show the young man's duties to his State at the present age. The sturdy Puritan of New England did not submit to the many self-imposed hardships for the value it would then be to him, but he bore those trials as a means to a noble end. His thoughts went beyond the limits of a single day, and beyond his own community. He was a man who considered power as more than possession, principle as more than acquirements, personality as paramount to personal allegiance. His life with all its powers was held in trust, and to the fulfillment of this trust he subordinated all considerations of personal pleasure. It was the Puritan who, by subjecting his power and his love to self-imposed restraints, made freedom possible in two hemispheres.

The close of the 19th century has witnessed the expansion of the geographical boundaries of man's interests, comparable only to that which came three centuries earlier in the days of Queen Elizabeth; and it is for the young men of this generation to decide how these new fields shall be occupied and developed.

Every young man should enter upon these duties which lie out before him not merely to gratify commercial or political ambitions, but in a spirit whereby he may exercise that trust which has been given him for the advancement of human civilization.

Every individual citizen is a sinew in the State's strength. He has a duty to perform; he is heir to all the duties and powers of his ancestors; upon him rest the burdens of government, and, as Lord Nelson said, "America expects every young man to do his full duty." It is his duty to stand firmly against all efforts or movements to weaken the force of the law, to disturb social order, or to tear down the Stars and the Stripes and substitute the red flag of the anarchist. The welfare of the State is dependent upon his actions and deeds, and the higher his position, the more is his duty increased of rendering to the State his best services.

Whatever be the character of the nation, that is a result of his deeds. Who in this country can say he has nothing to do with the action of the government? It is said that the grand monarch, Louis XIV., exclaimed in the full splendor and arrogance of his power, "The State! I am the State." Thus he considered the whole purpose and life of the State as centered in himself. The people were in reality his servants; they moved at the beckon of his hand. With us it is not so. In a wholly different sense every American can as truly and with a far nobler meaning say, "I am the nation." Yet this very fact of personal, individual responsibility, and this sense of national duty and allegiance, make the American citizen proud of these responsibilities which he owes to his government.

The following passage from the pen of Sir William Jones will further convince you that the greatness of a nation consists not in broad extent of domain, nor in its past achievements, but in the men who compose its citizenship: "What constitutes a State?

Not high-raised battlement or labored mound,
Thick wall or moated gate;
Not cities proud with spires and turrets crowned;
Not bays and broad-armed ports,
Where laughing at the storm, rich navies ride;
Not starred and spangled courts,
Where low-browed baseness wafts perfume to pride.
No: men, high-minded men,
With powers as high above dull brutes endued
In forest, brake or den,
As beasts excel cold rocks and brambles rude:
Men who their duties know,
But know their rights, and knowing dare maintain,
And crush the tyrant while they rend the chain:

These constitute the State,
And sovereign law, that State's collected will O'er thrones and globes elate,
Sits empress, crowning good, repressing ill."

A brief comparison of the motives and careers of two of the world's greatest generals, Washington and Napoleon, men of the same century and with similar opportunities of leadership in their respective nations, will doubtless show which had the nobler purpose as a citizen.

The one, our hero, a man of unswerving integrity, of unlimited ability and of unrestrained devotion to country, gave his whole life of some fifty years of active service, free from the thought of recompense, to the great but noble task of leading his people. He led them for years amidst trials undescribable, fighting for our greatest blessing, liberty. He, as victor, emerged from this long struggle. 'Twas he who led us while wringing freedom from the tyrannical land of George III and from the British parliament. Having gained our independence, this same sage gave many more years of noble service to his beloved country and government.

Thus in every respect we may say Washington was a model hero. But with this heroic figure, let us contrast the mighty Napoleon, from a mental standpoint perhaps the abler of the two. Instead of giving self-hearted devotion to the upbuilding of the French government, what did he do? He worshipped ambition; this was his idol. He strove year after year to increase his power. Self-aggrandizement was his motto. In seeking these ends, regardless of principle and without mercy, he led his adopted country into unutterable ruin. From this comparison we may well surmise the true loyal motive which should prompt every citizen in performing his duties to his government. Selfish motives lead to destruction. Many nations have fallen because their citizens have failed to meet their proper obligations in the true and noble sense of the term.

As another example of the results of what one individual's works may do, it is only necessary to mention the

As another example of the results of what one individual's works may do, it is only necessary to mention the deeds of Gladstone or Queen Elizabeth whose noble works have exalted the whole British nation.

The lives of Madison, Jefferson, Jno. Paul Jones and hosts of others who grasped the meagre opportunities of their age and accomplished such noble deeds, should animate every young man and bestir him to his proper sense of duty to his state in this age. The noble deeds which these men by undaunted courage, sound judgment and self-sacrifice did for the Thirteen Colonies, yea, for America, is but an example of what any man of fair intellectual ability can do for his people, if he be just, high-minded and sympathetically devoted to their best interests. After observing what wonders have been accomplished in this grand country, it must be remembered that there are still vaster fields for development. In feudal times it was the boast of the knight that no appeal from the weaker sex went unheeded. This has been properly called the age of chivalry and one of the greatest needs of today is a revival of the spirit of that age in the knightly devotion to the welfare of the nation. It is not probable that all young men will advocate the same measures, but they should as did Clay, Webster, Calhoun and Lincoln, have in view not the mere interest of self-aggrandizement, or the narrow interests of any one class, but should strive for what they believe to be broad principles of public interest and national improvement.

It was in the spirit of these sages that our republic accomplished its growth and development in the last century, and it is for the young men of today to see that the same spirit is applied to the yet larger problems which now confront them. In the days of Cæsar "I am a Roman citizen" was a proud, exultant declaration. It was not only protection, but it meant more, it was honor and glory. Twenty centuries of advancing civilization have given to the declaration "I am an American" a higher and nobler place. This declaration ranks in the forefront of earthly titles. It is a call to the highest fidelity, it proclaims a sharing in the world's greatest opportunities. To be worthy of pro-deeds of Gladstone or Queen Elizabeth whose noble works have exalted the whole British nation.

claiming this declaration, requires that every young man should live his life in the full sense of the nobility, of the citizens' service. It is true that perhaps he cannot add to the glory of those whose deeds he celebrates, but he can be an instrument in the carrying of the work which they initiated one historic step farther towards its accomplishment. In the words of Abraham Lincoln, no less appropriate now than in the day when they were first spoken at Gettysburg, "It is for each young man to be dedicated to the task which lies out before him." "That from those honored dead who fell at Lexington and Yorktown while struggling for their rights and the freedom which we now enjoy, and in reverence of those who were slain in the memorable sixties, every man should take increased devotion to that cause by which they gave the last full measure of devotion. He should resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain, and that upon sheer perseverance and loyalty to state and country depends the perpetuity of the Grand American Republic whose basis is government of the people, by the people and for the people."

THE READING ROOM.

Quite a number of students are continually making inquiries as to magazines and literary topics in general, and, as there has never been quite a clear understanding about this, the following information, with a few suggestions and regulations, is published for the benefit of the college at large, including the faculty and others, as well as the student body.

It will be noticed that the four rows of tables in the reading room are numbered consecutively from 1 to 4.

We have classified the magazines according to the respective departments in which they properly belong, and a list (complete as possible) of these magazines, with the respective number of the table or tables to which they have been assigned, is here given. There are several publications

If each student will regard the above arrangement closely, and make it his duty to see that the magazines are not mixed up, it will be a mutual benefit. Any magazine can then be located at a moment's notice, and new issues can be more quickly put in place. Therefore,—

DO NOT MOVE MAGAZINES FROM ONE TABLE TO ANOTHER!

If, by reason of choice, or lack of space, you sit at one table and wish to read a magazine from another do it, but return the magazine to its proper table when you finish. When possible, sit at the table where the magazine you wish is placed. The magazines on the table are all the current issues, and are changed as soon as new copies arrive. Current issues must not leave the reading room except over night, and then must be returned the 1st hour. Back numbers can be removed from the shelves only by permission, and when obtained, must be returned to the table of the assistant in charge.

Various pamphlets, college catalogs, bulletins, etc., which come only spasmodically, are left on the shelves and can be borrowed.

Students who desire information on any particular subject can readily find all references in the "Readers' Guide

Recreation,
Über Land und Meer,
Second Row, Last Table.

Harper's Monthly,
Scribner's,
Century,
Cosmopolitan,
Everybody's,
McClure's,
World's Work,
Munsey's.

The above does not include all the publications which are subscribed to by the institution, but embraces practically all the popular ones which are sent to this room: A more comprehensive collection, principally on agriculture, and foreign publications, will be found in the Library.

SENIOR CLASS EXERCISES.

On Friday morning, (Feb. 22nd) at 10:30 o'clock, the Senior Class had their usual exercises in Langdon Hall. The members of the graduating class formed in the main building and marched to Langdon Hall in a body. When the hall was reached a division took place, those who were to take part in the exercises marched up on the stage while the others took their places in the audience. Then the following program was rendered:

Music—Band.

Prayer—Rev. C. A. Cornell.

Music—Band.

Introduction—J. A. York.

History—E. T. Collier.

Poem—Miss D. C. Ward.

Music—Band.

Oration—N. B. McLeod.

Prophecy—C. M. Hudson.

Every speaker proved to be the right one in the right place. The fine weather and the appreciative audience, together with the excellent program made the exercises a complete success. We now turn this part of our drama over to the sturdy lads, who are to come after us, and at the same time wishing them much success in their undertakings.

BASKET BALL.

The Y. M. C. A. Basket Ball Team, of Columbus, Ga., has met defeat at the hands of the Auburn team twice this year. The first game was played here two weeks ago, and resulted in a victory for Auburn, the score being 29 to 27. At the end of the second half the score stood 27 to 27. The tie was played off, Auburn winning on two foul goals thrown by Gibson.

The game was very interesting and exciting. Auburn took the lead in the first half and Columbus was never ahead during the entire game. The college team was handicapped by Ware and Whitaker being taken out of the game on account of injuries. It can safely be said, if "Bob" and "Whit" had remained in the game the score would have been slightly different. The Columbus team played a fast aggressive game. Captain Peacock and Duncan were the Y. M. C. A.'s mainstays.

The line up of the two teams are shown below:

Columbus.		Auburn.
*Peacock	R. Forward	*Woodruff
Duncan	L. Forward	Gibson
Dozier	Center	Ware
Newman	R. Guard	Lacey
Thornton	L. Guard	Whitaker

*Captains.

Auburn substituted Dryer for Ware and Croker for Whitaker.

The second game with Columbus was played in Columbus on Saturday night. Everybody in college realized it was an unusually hard game, as the closeness of the score in the preceding game showed that the teams were very evenly matched. Then, too, Columbus had the advantage, being "at home," having her rooters, having the lights arranged in a satisfactory manner and also to "warm up" last so they could go in the game in good form. Despite all these odds the Auburn boys went into the game with a vim, and a determination to win. When the game ended the score was something like 16 to 11, and Auburn was written above the sixteen.

The game was a hotly contested one, and there was not but very little slow work during the game. Both teams played as if their lives depended on the game, and when the timekeeper's whistle blew at the end of the second half the best team had won the game.

Although the game was played hard it was remarkably clean, and the Columbus people all admitted that their team had met a better one. All the Auburn boys expressed themselves as having had a good trip and as receiving fine treatment while in Columbus.

The line-up and points made by the players are shown below :

B. A. C., 29; AUBURN, 23.

On Saturday night, Feb. 16th, the Auburn Basket Ball Team failed to out do their opponents for the first time this season. The game was played in the "Gym" of the Birmingham Athletic Club, before a large and enthusiastic audience. It was a "bitter pill to have to swallow," but very few teams can win all the time, and very few teams are fortunate to win nearly all the time as the A. P. I. "five" has done in the last two years. Not trying to ring in old "gags," etc., but this was one time where a team was out of form. Ware, one of our mainstays, was nearly out of commission, and "running on one side." After about ten minutes of play in the first half "Whit" had a "shop tag" placed on him and he was sent to the side lines for repairs.

Auburn played an up hill game and the closeness of the score shows that victory was everything but a "walk over." It is hoped that another game can be played with the Athletic Club, so Auburn can get a chance to redeem herself. With the team in good shape it is very likely that the A. P. I. boys can make the next game a little more interesting for the Magic City Team.

The line up and points made by the players are below:

B. A. C.		Auburn.
McKinney, 9	R. Forward	Woodruff, 8
Biddle, 8	L. Forward	Gibson, 9
Spencer, 2	Center	Ware, 5

~~CLASS FOOT BALL.~~

"The same old story in the same old way." For the third time in two years the class of 1907 and the class of 1909 have played 0 to 0 foot ball games.

On Friday the Seniors and Sophomores played one of the most hotly contested class games ever witnessed on the college campus. These same two classes played two similar games last year leaving championship undecided, the Advisory Board settling the question by awarding members of both class teams their numerals. A majority of the men on both teams participated in the championship games last year, and with the outcome of those games still fresh on their memory, they went into the game to strive hard to settle the championship in one game. Their efforts went for naught. "Time alone doth change all things," but twelve months time did not have any effect on the scores of these games.

The odds favored the Seniors and when the Sophs kicked off to the Seniors the 1907 team soon had the ball deep in the Sophomores territory. The ball remained in the Sophomore's territory all of the first half and nearly all of the second half. The Seniors gained more ground than the Sophomores, but the Sophomores line held in good form and there was little ground gaining through it, whenever the ball got close to the Sophomore's goal.

Both teams were forced to punt a great deal, Swart doing the "stunts" for the Sophs and Edge for the Seniors.

Delayed passes, double passes and forward passes were attempted, but in nearly every instance they failed to work, and often resulted in a loss of ground or the ball. For the Sophomores, Herrin and Alexander played plucky ball, and Watkins and Richardson did good work for the Senior team.

The Seniors' sponsors were Missess Bessie and Otis Thach, and the Sophomores' sponsors were Miss Ashley, of Montgomery, and Miss Allen, of Tuscaloosa. The sponsors were in carriages decorated in their respective class colors.

The two teams lined up as follows:

1907 FOOT BALL SCHEDULE.

The following schedule has been prepared and given out by Faculty Manager Bragg:

- Oct. 7th—Maryville, on campus.
- Oct. 12th—Gordon, on campus.
- Oct. 19th—Sewanee, in Birmingham.
- Oct. 26th—Tech, in Atlanta.
- Nov. 2nd—Clemson, on campus.
- Nov. 9th—Mercer, in Macon.
- Nov. 16th—Alabama, in Birmingham.
- Nov. 28th—Georgia, in Atlanta.

The football schedule for next year included eight games, six of which are S. I. A. A. games, the other two games being with the two strongest "prep." teams in the South. It is an excellent schedule, and a rather hard one as it contains games with practically all the strong Southern teams, with the exception of Vanderbilt.

The Basket Ball games so far have resulted in the scores shown below:

- Auburn vs. Tulane, 34 to 15.
- Auburn vs. Mercer, 48 to 9.
- Auburn vs. Columbus Y. M. C. A., 29 to 27.
- Auburn vs. Birmingham Athletic Club, 23 to 29.

kinson is trying to get a few more games, including another one with the B. A. C. in Birmingham.

The Base Ball squad will be picked in a few days, and regular practices will be held every day that the weather permits.

The Columbus Enquirer-Sun, one of the leading dailies of the Empire State, not long ago printed a rather lengthy article in which they gave the reasons of the defeat of the Columbus Y. M. C. A. in the game at Auburn. The headlines of the article read as follows: "The Columbus Team Was at Disadvantage," and also "The Association Team Anticipates a Victory when Auburn Comes to Columbus." The writer of the article also proclaims to the unsuspecting Columbus public that the Association team is far superior to the Auburn team. Since the game in Columbus, probably a few people have changed their views on the relative strength of the two teams.

Among the causes of Columbus' defeat at Auburn are mentioned the following: Columbus warmed up first and then Auburn warmed up, thus Auburn went into the game warm while the Columbus players had time for their temperature to drop a few degrees. "The Columbus team was decidedly handicapped by two electric lights, one above each basket. The Association team is used to regulation equipment and do not need arc lights to find the baskets." "To play off the tie, the game was called again and the game awarded to Auburn, not on good playing, but on a pair of fouls called by an Auburn man."

In reply to this we can say that the Auburn team has been to Columbus twice and on both occasions they warmed up first, and later went into the game "cold and stiff." As to regulation equipment, etc. The Auburn equipment comes up nearer to the standard than the Columbus equipment. And "the Columbus team does not need lights to find the baskets." You wouldn't think so from the score of the last game. The assertion that Wilkinson awarded the game to Auburn is absurd and without foundation. Columbus made the fouls and Wilkinson did right in calling them. The bottom of the whole thing is that it was the first time Columbus had been defeated in quite a while, and it was rather hard to bear.

There has been a great deal of talk of playing the Senior-Sophomore game over again. Some wanted to play it off Wednesday, but the approaching examinations have about knocked that idea in the head. At present it looks as if it will be at least two weeks before the game can be played over again.

Mr. Homer Wright entertained several of his friends at dinner on Thursday evening. The fortunate ones on this occasion were Misses May Harvey, Fannie Heard; Messrs. Frazer, Cornell, Lett and Drake.

Miss Bessie Wright was the charming hostess to a large number of Auburn friends Saturday night in honor of her visitor, Miss Howard, of Tuskegee.

Dr. H. M. McLeod, of Atlanta, visited his brother, N. B. McLeod, here during the "Twenty Second Holidays."

The entertainment given by the Co-eds. on Friday night, Feb. 15th, at the residence of Prof. Rutland, was a success in every way. There was unlimited pleasure from the moment the guests arrived until the hour of departure came. It might seem to be the reverse of affairs, but the wedding came first. No little interest was manifested in "What did he do when he knelt at her feet?" (Aster) and, "What did she say?" (Johnny jump up.) But this did not last long for soon the guests were startled by the cry: "Fortunes told." Then through the medium of a little package the future of every one present was told. All seemed to be perfectly delighted with their happy lots and entered into the games, which followed, with great enthusiasm. These games, consisting of bid domino, "42," and the like were very interesting. Last, but not least, refreshments were served and soon the guests, after a pleasant exchange of greetings with one another, departed full of the good time they had had and wishing a repetition of something similar in the future.

Those who enjoyed the evening in this way were: Miss Chumly with Mr. T. M. Williams; Miss Kirby with Mr. Richardson; Miss Miller with Mr. Holleman; Miss Harvey with Mr. Meade; Miss Cooper with Mr. Hudson; Miss Argo with Mr. Clark; Miss Knapp with Mr. Deshazo; and Miss Whitaker with Mr. McLeod.

E. T. COLLIER, EDITOR

This being a portion of the year notable for its lack of sports and other attractions, most of the latest college papers are at a loss for news, and, consequently, are not up to the standard set by their earlier issues. Neither are the magazines as good as formerly. From every one the cry of "Examinations" is heard, and this cry we will present as an apology for any faults which the perusal of our column may suggest.

WHAT AILED HIM.

A Princeton man tells of a conversation that took place between the coach of a football eleven and one of the players. An important game was soon to be played, and the coach was, of course, anxious that every player should be in the best physical condition, says Harper's Weekly. But to his disgust one of the men, upon whom a great deal depended if the game was to be won, seemed to be in "bad form." Taking him aside, the coach had the following "heart to heart talk" with the recalcitrant:

"See here, you are not looking so good! Muscles flabby and wind bad—awful bad! What's the matter? Been drinking anything?"

"Not a drop."

"Then you must be smoking."

"Haven't touched a pipe, cigar or cigarette since the training began."

"Stuying?"

"Well, yes—a little."

Whereupon the coach gave vent to a snort of disgust. "See here! You've got to stop that! Do you want us to lose the game?"

There are about 90 young men whose names are on the roll of this society for the session of 1907, but we are indeed sorry to say that the average weekly attendance will not aggregate one-third of the number enrolled. We have some who are active and zealous society workers. This energetic spirit should be manifested by every member of this society. No one can estimate the value of society work. We should take more interest in the work. Here is the place where we are to learn how to stand up before the world and face the problems of the future. Regular, systematic attendance is the only way to accomplish the greatest results from a literary society. There is no student who cannot devote two hours weekly to a good society. What you get out of the work depends upon what you put into it. This is an individual matter, young men, and the benefit or reward which you will receive depends upon your individual work.

With a view to increase the attendance, interest and enthusiasm in our society work, the members in assembly on last Saturday night, Feb. 23, passed the following ordinance: "That the name of any member of the Websterian Society will be dropped from the roll of said society upon the failure to attend the meetings of this society for three successive meetings." "And that any member whose name is dropped from the roll of this society may have his name re-entered on the roll upon attending two successive meetings." This is not intended to debar anyone from being a member of our society, but it was solely for the purpose of arousing more interest in the society work that this ordinance was passed. Why should the secretary continue to call a roll of 90 names when not more than twenty members are present? Wake up, young men! Come and be with us. We need your presence and you need the benefit to be derived from co-operating with us. The society is yours. Bring your friend with you.

THE WIRT LITERARY SOCIETY.

There was much enthusiasm manifested at a recent meeting of the Wirt Literary Society when the United States Senate was reproduced. Senators Tillman, Foraker, Smoot, Bailey, Depew, Dryden, Morgan, Pettus, Platt, Aldrich, and a few others were represented. On the whole, Senators Smoot, Bailey and Tillman appeared the most aggressive. Feigned antagonisms held sway and wit and humor were not lacking. Senator Smoot, owing to his residence in Utah, had trouble because of his plurality of wives. Senator Tillman, with his one eye and unflinching courage, alarmed the Senate very frequently, with his startling reports from South Carolina. Senator Bailey warded off a bill to dislodge him by a timely motion for adjournment. His oil record liked to have been the cause of his removal.

There is much interest taken in these varied programs and the public is cordially invited to come and partake of these benefits and amusements.
